During the fine weather of October comes the call of outdoors. Even the bridge enthusiasts desert the table and the moving picture fan the matinee. Every afternoon sees the golf links dotted with the decorative brightness of sport coats and sweaters. Mrs. J. L. Stephens can often be observed on the green, cutting down her score, and Miss Margaret Rollins and Miss Juliet Bowling. Golf is indeed the coming game. In Columbia, bogie, putting, mashie and drive have become incorporated into the fashionable vocabulary. If you see a group of people talking all at once with unintelligible words and gestures, you may be sure they are not discussing the election or the latest bridge score. Sooner or later one voice will rise above the others: "Well, I had a perfect approach." The rest may be drowned by: "I told him then if he had used a mashie he could have made that hole in three; personally I prefer a niblik." Then before long, by what the psychologists call association of ideas, some one will sigh for the country club.

However, golf always steps aside to let the football team go by—"if I were not on a foforesome I should like to be on the eleven,"—and, although all other diversions claim allegiance, always we dance.

FENCE KEEPS COAL FROM THEFT

Whittle & Hockaday Company Has Protection in M. K. & T. Yards.

The high wire fence that encloses the coalyard of the Whittle & Hockaday Coal Company, near the M. K. & T. tracks, is probably the only one in the state that is built on land owned by a railroad, according to S. A. Schrock, M. K. & T. agent.

The yard will hold from four to six cars. It was fenced last fall on account of excessive coal stealing. The offenders did not stop at small quantities, but made away with wagonloads at a time.

The police caught several of the coal thieves last winter. After receiving a scare, the thieves stopped for a time, only to start it again when their experiences were forgotten. Other coal dealers are unprotected.

Students To Judge Advertising.

A committee of students of the School of Journalism has been appointed by J. B. Powell to select the best advertisement in a recent issue of the Fayette Democratic Leader. Henry T. Burckhardt, editor of the paper, has offered a prize of one-half page of advertising to the advertiser whose copy wins the prize, and $5 to the person who picks the winning advertisement and writes the best letter.
